TOKYO, May 26 — With the wedding market in Japan projected to more than double from \$2 billion in 2026 to \$4.3 billion dollars by 2036, the country is quickly becoming a popular wedding destination. In response, Hotel Chinzanso Tokyo has introduced a wedding plan with English-language support.

Hotel Chinzanso Tokyo is recognized with France's Prix Villégiature Best Hotel Ambiance Award and the national Good Design Award. The venues overlook the hotel's Japanese garden, which features cherry blossoms, camellias, and other seasonal flora throughout the year. Located in central Tokyo, the hotel is accessible from both Narita and Haneda airports, accommodating guests visiting from overseas and couples wanting to extend their trip into a honeymoon.

The package includes attire, floral arrangements, photography, and catering for ceremonies and receptions. Couples may choose between Japanese and Western styles for outfits and venues. For dining, the hotel's Japanese-French course is available, or couples can choose traditional cuisine at Kinsui, the hotel's ryotei restaurant. An Executive Suite stay is included the night before and after the wedding.

For a more intimate celebration, photography-only plans are available; couples can also include the hotel's Tokyo Sea of Clouds mist display in their shoot.

Using video chat and email, the dedicated wedding team provides language and cultural assistance, accompanying couples throughout the entire process, whether they are in Japan or planning from abroad.

"The hotel is pleased to release this plan in response to growing interest," says Tomohiko Chihiro, General Manager of Hotel Chinzanso Tokyo. "Around 1,500 couples hold their weddings here annually—we hope this new package will allow international newlyweds to celebrate here."
